Seeing Stars in Michelin acclaimed Mallorca

With six Michelin stars now being awarded to Mallorca's chefs, the island has more Michelin accolades than Madrid. The wine industry is going through a renaissance and is producing some of the most interesting wines in Europe using local, indigenous grapes. Consequently Balearic Discovery is delighted to team up with one of the most established Michelin star chefs on the island, Marc Fosh, to offer a stunning gastronomic weekend that demonstrates the joys of Mallorcan cooking and wine. This really is one of the most special breaks for those that love food and wine.

Based at the fantastic Reads hotel we are delighted to offer the opportunity to really experience Michelin star food in all its various stages. The four day gastronomic break includes two cookery courses at the fabulous boutique cookery school Fosh Food based in Palma. These themed demonstrations enlighten you how to create spectacular dishes, and not only do you get to learn, you eat the dishes, taste the wine and are inspired by the fabulous Fosh Food team

The weekend also includes a three course a la carte meal in Reads Michelin star restaurant, lunch in the Bistro at the hotel, a surprise Michelin star tasting menu which will leave you stunned, a market visit to learn how to tell your tomatoes from your tomatiges, cheese, ham and lots of wine tasting.

If you love food you will absolutely love this decadent weekend. It really is perfect for those that delight in all the senses and provides you with the opportunity to stun your dinner companions as you produce some of the most amazing meals from the simplest of ingredients. You really can make these at home and we can not emphasise enough how this is the break from heaven for any food lover.
