Olives, romance and music – last minute winter breaks in Mallorca.

As we're about to enter the beginning of the festive season Balearic Discovery is delighted to offer a number of alternative ways to spend weekends on the run up to Christmas.

On the third Sunday of November, Caimari which is home to olive trees that are over a 1000 years old, celebrates the Olive Fair. Quite possibly one of the most magnificent festivals on the island the olive fair is the place to eat olives, buy olive crafts and enjoy the pleasure of pressing freshly picked olives, one not to be missed. If you enjoy seeing the alternative side of life in European countries the Olive fair will do this. The price for a three night stay including bed and breakfast, and car hire is just £150 per person based on two sharing. Flights can be arranged from £70 return depending on departure airport for the weekend of 18 – 21 November.

If you are looking for somewhere to romance your partner we can offer the perfect solution by providing a four poster bed in one of the islands more secluded and beautiful spots. We are delighted to offer a wonderful romantic retreat at hotel Can Furios. The hotel has an intimate atmosphere and you can be assured of a relaxing time on your romantic break. A three night stay in a luxury suite costs just £300 per person based on two sharing. This includes collection from the airport where you'll be swept to the hotel. Dinner will be served in the restaurant that has been awarded two Michelin Towers and you can relax in the bar for a night cap before retreating back to your romantic nest. Flights range from £70 upwards

The Gamelan is a beautiful instrument used by Indonesian monks to accompany and support their meditation. One of Europe's most respected Gamelan musicologists can be found on Mallorca and is running the next Gamelan workshop the weekend of the 4-6 November. The ten hour course is spread over three days giving you time to explore the island too. Accommodation in a beautiful converted town house, car hire and course are available for just £200 per person based on two sharing. Flights can be arranged for just £100 depending on departure airport.
